BOARD APPROVES PLANS FOR CITY IMPROVEMENTS

At the meeting of the Daly City board of trustees Monday evening, all members being present, the board approved the plans for improving the unimproved streets between Hillcrest and Vista Grande districts, along with the half of Knowles avenue, and the curbing of the upper section of the park. March 28th was set as the time for filing protests against the beginning of such work.

A communication from the San Mateo County Chamber of Commerce, inviting Daly City to join that body, was read, and was explained by the manager of that body, Roscoe D. Wyatt. Action in this matter was postponed until the next meeting of the board.

The fire commissioners extended an invitation to the trustees to be present on March 7 at the City Hall to witness a demonstration of modern safety appliances.

A petition from residents of Crocker and Evergreen avenues for a street light at the corner of Crocker and Evergreen was granted, following the light committee's investigation.

The committee appointed at the last meeting to secure a bus line for Daly City reported that they had met with some of the officials of the Market Street Railway Company, and asked for further time.

Plans for widening Hillside boulevard, to create a better drainage, was read, and there being no protests from the property owners in that section the work was ordered done.

Mr. Brown spoke on the milk inspection law of the state of California and urged the city trustees to adopt the same. This being a law that requires much thought, the board will take the matter under consideration.

The superintendent of sanitation was instructed to place more "No Dumping" signs on the upper road in the Crocker district, and the city marshal was instructed to keep up the good work by arresting all who violate this law.

SPEEDING AUTOISTS CURBED BY MARSHAL

City Marshal J. T. Doyle has been putting the fear of the law into the hearts of speeding autoists during the past week. It seems to be a great temptation for some drivers to "step on the gas" when they reach Daly City, and frequently accidents are narrowly averted. Marshal Doyle is determined that speeding in this section shall be stopped, and there are a number of motorists who were haled before Judge Johnson during the past week that will in all probability decide that safe and sane driving is the "best bet" when they pass through Daly City. Our local officials are doing everything within their power to enforce the ordinance regarding speeding, and will appreciate the co-operation of all law-abiding citizens in making our thoroughfares safe for pedestrians, as well as the careful motorist.

ENJOYABLE MARTHA WASHINGTON PARTY

The Martha Washington party given by Mrs. S. A. Landini at her home on February 22 was a very delightful affair. The costumes were very pretty and the decorations were in keeping with the day. The supper was served on old-fashioned blue and white China, and the favorite dishes of the first president and his wife were enjoyed to the fullest. The place cards were small hatchets and the entire color scheme was red, white and blue.

Those present were: Mesdames G. Augustien, E. Twesten, E. Cuneo, H. H. Smith, A. Hilton, E. O'Connor, A. McCard, B. Foppiano, A Chesney, L. Tompsett, M. Weagner, H. McKee, J. Anderson, M. Friman, G. Gehringer, E. Grathum, A. Fonseca.

PREPARES YOUTH FOR THE WORK OF BUSINESS WORLD

The four year course preparatory to business has proven to be the most popular at Jefferson Union high school. Of a total of two hundred twenty-five pupils in the day school, one hundred fifty are taking at least one commercial subject, such as stenography, typing, bookkeeping or junior business methods. This popularity is to be expected, as our community is a part of a great commercial center offering unlimited opportunity in the field of business for an ambitious boy or girl.

Popularity, however, is not the true test of a commercial course. The content of the course must be such as to offer real development of character, and real training for the work of the business world. The final test is the ability of graduates to make good.

Particular emphasis is placed by our commercial teachers on training for clerical work, salesmanship, advertising, filing, and commercial correspondence.

"Three-fourths of present day business is conducted by mail," states Miss Helen Reveal, teacher of shorthand, typing and junior business methods. Normally a boy or girl graduates from high school between the ages of seventeen and nineteen. The commercial course prepares them for the kind of position which they will be able to enter at that age. Working ability in filing, clerking, typing, shorthand or bookkeeping can be achieved at that age if a carefully chosen course is followed. In addition to these special subjects, general culture is achieved through the study of English, foreign language, science, art, history, etc.

Parents, do you think it necessary for your boy or girl to finish up at a business "college" after taking a four year commercial course at Jefferson Union high school?

This is absolutely unnecessary. The high school teaches everything which is taught in the average "college," and the teachers are better certificated and more capable. The high school gives in addition a choice of cultural subjects, and all of this is free to the public.

Every one of the graduates of the commercial department of our high school is now succcessfully employed. The school assists in placing graduates, and also those who find it impossible to complete the full course, while some are working part time while attending school.

NOVELTY SHOP MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

Madam Lombard, for some time located at 6300 Mission street, will occupy a larger and more commodious store, at 6380 Mission street, on March 7. Having been in her present location for the past eighteen months, her business in that time has increased to such an extent that it was absolutely necessary for her to move into larger quarters, hence her determination to move into the new building, which has just been completed. In the new location she will carry a full line of novelties and school supplies and toys, and she welcomes her many friends in Daly City and vicinity to come and pay her a visit in her new quarters.

OFFICERS SELECTED BY THE LADIES AID

The luncheon served by the Ladies Aid of Grace Presbyterian church, and furnished by the Merchants' Co-operative Association, was a huge success, and many complimentary comments were given by the good crowd that partook of the meal.

At the close of the luncheon the ladies held their annual election of officers, the following being elected: Mrs. George Archer, president; Mrs. Brauns, vice-president; Mrs. Alward, secretary; Mrs. Tom Swan, treasurer.

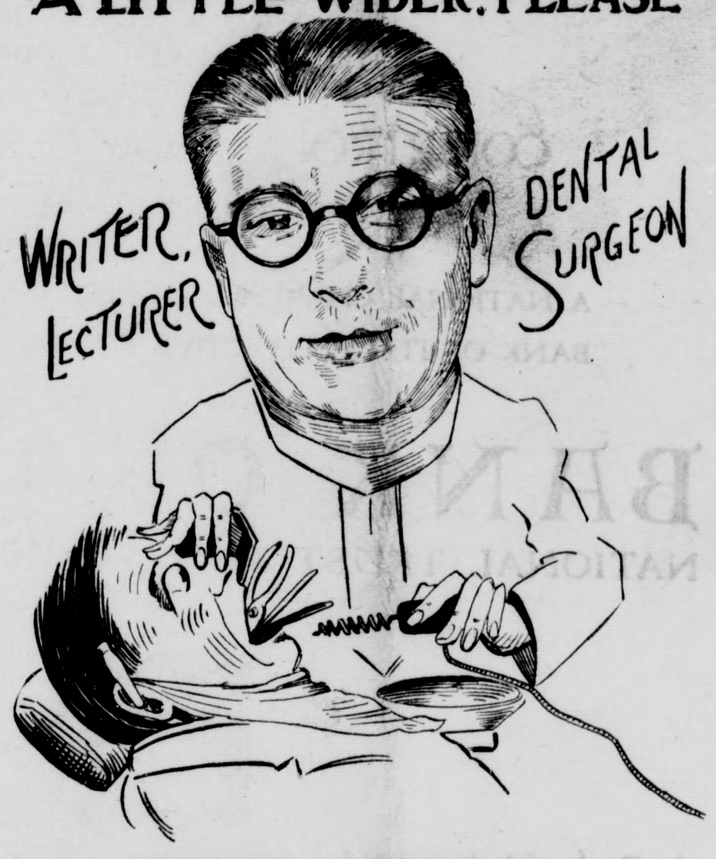
The reports for the year showed a most gratifying balance for the year, and the women of the Aid deserve more than passing comment for their faithful and untiring efforts.

PLAN TO REMEDY FLOOD CONDITIONS

An exhaustive report on a plan to remedy flood conditions along California drive at a cost of $40,000 was presented to the city trustees of Burlingame at a special meeting, and the approximate cost given by City Engineer James S. James. Residents of the Easton addition and property owners outside of the city will share the cost of improvement, according to the plan. The cost is figured at $32.23 per acre for land outside the city, and $13.14 per lot for holdings within the city.

Community Builders

A LITTLE WIDER, PLEASE



WILLIAM J. LANTHEAUME

William J. Lantheaume, whom you see performing the operation upon his helpless victim, is the subject of this sketch.

He was born in Butte, Montana, in 1896, but has been a resident of the San Francisco vicinity for twenty-five years. His schooling has all been received in this community, first in the Ocean View grammar school, then in Mission high school. After graduating from high school, he received his degree in the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

After leaving college, Lantheaume worked for eight years in the field of mining and assaying, for Farisch & Company of San Francisco, metallurgists and chemical engineers. This work took him over a large area of the state, a part of the time being spent in the wilds of Plumas county.

In August of 1926, Dr. Lantheaume opened his office in Daly City for the practice of dentistry, in which he has been very successful.

His aim is to impress upon the people of Daly City the importance of mouth hygiene, and of preventive measures in caring for the teeth.

He says he entered upon his present career because of an earnest desire to render a public service in caring for healthy teeth so they may remain so.

He is the author of a number of treaties on mouth hygiene, and has lectured upon the care of the mouth and teeth before clubs and schools.

He believes that in this way the public should be shown the advantage to be gained by prevention rather than by cure, if possible.

The doctor is a public spirited member of our community, always ready and willing to do his share toward the betterment of Daly City.

He is unmarried as yet. Give him time.

MOTORIST TIES UP BOTTLENECK TRAFFIC

Traffic through the "bottleneck" was tied up for nearly an hour last Sunday as the result of the attempt of a motorist to get around the machines that evidently were not traveling as fast as he thought they should.

Juan Lopez, aged 35, of Five Points, Redwood City, discovered that by steering his car astraddle of the curbing that separates the street car tracks from the highway he could spin along without waiting for the jam to move. This scheme of Lopez' worked very well until a street car hove in sight, coming toward his car.

Then he discovered that the street car prevented him from going ahead, and a solid line of automobiles that filled the highway beside him and for two miles behind prevented his moving in the opposite direction.

Lopez and his automobile were the object of loud remarks from scores of stalled motorists and street car men, until a score of husky drivers hit upon the idea of picking up the light car and carrying it into a field out of the way, which they did, and traffic again moved. Lopez will in all probability decide that it is much better "to make haste slowly."

CONTINUE AUDIT OF TREASURER'S BOOKS

The auditing of the books of the late Frank K. Towne, city treasurer of Redwood City, started last week, is still in progress, and from present indications will not be completed for several days. Mayor Henry Beeger has announced that as soon as the work is finished the board of city trustees will issue a statement to the public covering the financial condition of the city.

Appropriation for Airport Site

San Francisco's municipal airport came closer to actuality last Monday when the board of supervisors appropriated $10,000 for preliminary grading of the site recently selected in San Mateo county. Under the provisions of the accompanying bill, the board of works was authorized to prepare specifications and to let contracts for the work.

NIGHT MARSHAL HIT BY RECKLESS DRIVER

Night Marshal Barney Hilton met with an accident last Saturday night that might have proved more serious than it did, and he is congratulating himself that he was not fatally injured.

Marshal Hilton was called to the street by a bus driver, and while talking to him, a reckless motorist came by, his machine striking Hilton, who was painfully bruised, and has since been unable to attend to his duties as night marshal, his place being filled by William Hopman. Barney is making rapid progress toward recovery and hopes to be back on the job soon.

TRAFFIC OFFICERS MAKE GOOD RECORD

San Mateo county traffic officers were responsible for the arrest of 3,223 traffic law violators, who paid fines reaching a total of $4,944.50 during the period between January 1 to December 1, 1926, it is revealed in a report of the state division of motor vehicles department, filed by C. K. Harden, chief inspector, last week.

The report stated that 3,454 persons had been "pulled over" to the curb by the San Mateo county officers. In their travels up and down the highways, the traffic men covered a total mileage of 122,008 miles. San Mateo county had no delinquent fees to report.

For the entire state, the report said, 66,416 persons were arrested for traffic violations, and $444,407.15 paid in fines.

SUES FOR INJURIES TO SON

Injuries suffered by Eugene Valueff, minor son of Sergy Valueff, of South San Francisco, are made the basis of a suit for damages of $10,000 filed in the Superior Court at Redwood City by the father of the lad against T. C. Morton and Charles Carmichael. The boy received a fracture of the right leg and other injuries when struck by a delivery truck driven by Morton and belonging to Carmichael, the complaint states.

DEADLY BACILLUS RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF GIRL

The mysterious death of Elvira Fiorentini in South San Francisco last Friday morning was due to the deadly bacillus botulinus, it has been decided. Local officials were baffled at the mysterious circumstances surrounding the death of the 16-year-old girl and called in H. C. Moore of the United States bureau of chemistry to aid in solving the mystery.

Investigation disclosed the fact that the girl was an enthusiastic student of cooking, and had recently purchased a new cook book which contained a formula for preserving string beans, which she experimented with a few weeks ago. On Wednesday evening she proudly opened a jar of the beans and offered some to her father, who barely tasted them and expressed the opinion that they were spoiled.

The girl, however, argued with him and ate a number of the beans to prove her contention that they were properly prepared. She was happy and light-hearted after the evening meal, and ate more of the beans before retiring. Her father, convinced that his daughter's canning process was not a success, threw the remainder of the jar of beans into the back yard and went to bed.

In the morning the young girl was in violent agony from some severe poisoning, and medical aid was summoned, but all efforts to save her life were in vain, and she died shortly before 6 o'clock Friday morning.

It was also discovered that a number of chickens and pigeons in the Fiorentini yard had eaten the beans which the father had thrown into the yard, and died from the poison they contained, Moore was convinced that botulinus had developed in the home canned beans, and pronounced that deadly poison as the cause of Miss Fiorentini's death.

NATIONALIZATION OF THE BANK OF ITALY

Nationalization of the Bank of Italy, and the conversion of its statewide system of branches into Bank of Italy, National Trust and Savings Association, has been formally approved by the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Reserve Board, it has been announced by James A. Bacigalupi, president of the institution.

The entire organization will be merged into the National system, and on Tuesday morning all of the branch offices opened for business under the new designation.

"Nationalization of the Bank of Italy, under the provisions of the McFadden Act is the concluding step in the perfection of our state-wide service," said Bacigalupi. "Nationalization not only means continuing operation within the Federal Reserve system, but also insures for the institution the full benefit of the modernized powers conferred upon National banks. For a considerable period the Bank of Italy has held an important role in the finances of the nation and the world, and also as the largest member of the Federal Reserve system in the Twelfth district. The time has now come when the bank should assume the responsibility that attends the national prominence to which it has risen, and we believe the most direct way in which to do this is through pursuing our present course.

"In addition, it is obvious that California is certain to gain its prestige by possessing the second largest National bank in America in the ranking published by Financial Age of New York; and as ardent Californians, we can scarcely be unmindful of whatever may redound to the benefit of the state in which the institution was cradled, and in which it has experienced such prosperity."

The Bank of Italy is credited with the second largest holdings of government bonds in the United States, ranking next to the First National Bank of New York.

STOCK YARDS OPEN AT SOUTH CITY

A new industrial plant opened in San Mateo county on Wednesday, when the South San Francisco Union stock yards began business. Located at the meat packing center in San Mateo county, the new stock yards cover an area of 50 acres, equipped with all modern facilities for receiving, feeding and handling livestock both on consignment and for the packing companies.

Louis Swift, president of Swift & Co., of Chicago, was in attendance at the opening of the yards. He was accompanied by other officials of Swift & Co., who made an inspection of the new yard, declaring it to be thoroughly up-to-date, and in fact the most advenced in the country.

GOLDEN GATE SPAN IS SANCTIONED BY WAR DEPARTMENT

The plans for spanning the Golden Gate with a great cantilever-suspension bridge, linking San Francisco with the north counties, are going forward with new impetus following the news from Washington that the war department has reaffirmed its decision of 1924 to issue a permit for the mammoth structure.

The next step will be taken by the Secretary of State, who will advertise for the formation of the bridge district for a period of three weeks in the six counties concerned, and call upon the property owners who come within the assessment district to file their protests, if any, within not more than ten days after the appearance of the notice.

After all protestants have filed their claims, hearings will be held in the Superior Courts of their respective counties on the question of whether their property would be injured or benefited by the proposed $30,000,000 bridge.

Charles H. Brennan, attorney for Joseph B. Strauss, nationally known bridge engineer, who designed the original plans for the Golden Gate bridge, estimates that the legal proceedings incident to the formation of the bridge district will be out of the way by this fall, after which a bond election may be held with eighteen months to raise the necessary funds

LABOR CONDITIONS REPORTED AS GOOD

Business conditions in California, as judged by the volume of employment and weekly payroll, were better in January, 1927, than in January, 1926. This is shown in the recent number of the California Labor Market Bulletin, issued by Walter G. Mathewson, commissioner of the Beaureau of Labor and Statistics.

According to the Labor Market Bulletin, the same 794 representative California industrial establishments which employed 141,338 workers in January, 1926, employed 143,317 workers in January, 1927, an increase of 1.4 per cent over last year. The average weekly earnings of California industrial workers in January, 1927, was $28.75. The corresponding average last year was $28.51.

SUNSET TUNNEL TO BE COMPLETED IN JULY

Plans for a parade of progress on the day when daylight breaks through the Sunset tunnel, now under construction, are being prepared by Sunset-Parkside District Inc., a property owner's association of the western half of San Francisco. This announcement is made by Dr. J. M. Toner, president of Sunset-Parkside District Inc.

It is expected that the men working on both sides of the tunnel will break through within five weeks, and that the tunnel will be completed and ready for travel next July. Prominent men from all over San Francisco will participate in the ceremonies celebrating the daylight breaking into the Sunset-Parkside.

BOOZE CACHE FOUND IN ATHERTON GARAGE

Last Monday Sheriff T. C. McGovern and a posse of officers made one of the largest liquor seizures in recent months when they discovered a cache of seventy-five barrels of wine, two barrels of high grade whisky and a dismantled still in a garage at Atherton. According to the sheriff, he had received complaints regarding the presence of lipuor in the garage, but because no sales were being made and because he could find no way to gain entrance, he could not secure a search warrant necessary for a raid. The night previous, however, the place was apparently entered by hi-jackers, who broke open a door and left it ajar. After an officer had investigated, a search warrant was secured and the seizure was made. Later A. Beltramo, of Menlo Park, was arrested on a charge of being the owner of the liquor and still, and was released on $500 bail.

OUR COUNTY CLERK IS AGAIN HONORED

County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese was again honored by the County Clerks' Association of California in being re-elected secretary of the association at the convention recently held in Sacramento. Mrs. Kneese has held the office since 1919, when she was first elected county clerk of San Mateo county. Mrs. Kneese has been confined to her home in Redwood City for the past week, suffering with a sever cold, but is now rapidly convalescing.

SIDELIGHTS

Perhaps there's nothing in a name, but A. G. Luck, of Bridgewell, England, thinks there is. He insured his married daughter against the birth of more than one child, and when she became the mother of twins, he collected $5,000.

In Russia paternalism has reached an unprecedented stage, illustrated by the raising of monkeys for gland transplanting operations and rejuvenation of old persons. For this purpose the government will establish an extensive monkey farm at Sukkum, in the Republic of Georgia.

Gambling for bibles is a rather unusual proceeding, but it has been in vogue at St. Ives, England, since 1678, when Dr. Robert Wilde left a fund for the yearly purchase of bibles, to be cast for with dice by boys and girls of the church. Formerly the dice were thrown on the communion table, but of late years another table, placed in the chancel, has been used.

Members of a religious cult of Dolton S. D., have queer ideas of ministering to their afflicted, according to a news dispatch. A woman member, Mrs. H. Wollman, supposed to be possessed of an evil spirit, was tied to her bed for five days, while the brethren and sisters prayed for her deliverance. She was nearly starved when rescued by a committee of business men and sent to a hospital.

"A pessimist is a man who has to live with an optimist." A newspaper recently credited this crisp epigram to Will Rogers. Arthur Brisbane says he doesn't doubt that Rogers said it, but avers that Ambrose Bierce also said it fifty years ago. Wonder where Bierce got the idea.

Brooklyn's latest fraternal order is the A. P. P. A. At present it is composed of only three members, all of whom are in jail. But they say there are thousands of eligibles, and a rush to join is expected. The organization is the "Alimony Payers' Protective Association."

Whatever we may think of the Mexicans, we must admit that at least one of them has much to commend him. Congressman Juan Salas Barras has declined an offer of $50,000 to tell theatre goers in the United States how he killed Pancho Villa.

An unusual plea was made at Nashville recently by Rev. Morgan Says, arrested on a liquor charge, who said: "I have been a pastor for several years, but my family was starving on what I was paid, and I had to earn money, so I made liquor."

It recently developed that Flo Ziegfeld got stung when he took out a $100,000 insurance policy a few years ago to insure that Sally Long of the Follies would not get married. Sally was secretly married at 15, and had two children when the policy was written, as was disclosed by her recent suit for divorce.

Those who enjoy reading whisky advertisements in foreign magazines will not be denied that privilege, according to a ruling by General Andrews, dry chief. The decision was rendered on account of a seizure of magazines containing liquor advertisements by inspectors at St. Albans, Vermont.

One measure of farmers' relief has been put through by the Kansas Farmers' Union. It has drafted an amendment to its constitution which prohibits the making of speeches before its conventions by office seekers.

Jack Dempsey took his recent defeat by Tunney in a sportsmanlike manner and has gained considerable popularity thereby. Speaking of the report that he was poisoned before the fight, he recently said: "All this stuff about my being poisoned is a lot of hokum. Tunney can whip any man in the ring today." But Jack says he will fight Gene again.

O. O. McIntyre, New York syndicate writer, says that bootleggers are imitating undertakers and others who have coined new names to designate their professions, and tells of one who has engraved business cards, with name and telephone number, while in the corner is the word "Bootician."

UPSET RECEIVER BRINGS FIRST AID FOR A FALL

The quick action of a telephone operator saved Mrs. Benjamin Greenbaum, of Patterson, N. J., from a serious situation. Mrs. Greenbaum, alone in her home, fell down a flight of stairs and fractured both arms. She lay in agony for several minutes, while trying to summon help. Then thinking of her telephone, she painfully made her way to the instrument and knocked off the receiver. Her screams for help were quickly understood by the telephone operator, who summoned an ambulance from the hospital.

Communism will be an accomplished fact when all who violate laws are in jail.

Husbands and wives used to bawl each other out in person. Now they do it through the newspapers.

WITH THE APPROVAL OF THE

COMPTROLLER OF CURRENCY

OF THE UNITED STATES

A NATIONAL CHARTER HAS BEEN GRANTED TO THE BANK OF ITALY, EFFECTIVE MARCH 1st, 1927, AS THE

BANK OF ITALY

NATIONAL TRUST AND SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

NATIONALIZATION OF the Bank of Italy not only means continuing operations within the Federal Reserve System, but also insures for the customers of the institution the full benefit of those advantages conferred upon National Banks by the congressional enactment.

The Bank of Italy has long ranked among the Nation's foremost banks both with respect to its aggregate resources and invested capital. The Executives of the institution have therefore accepted nationalization believing the time is now ripe to assume the responsibilities that attach to the prominence which the Bank of Italy holds in this country and abroad.

Through this action it is certain that California will gain added prestige; and as an institution operating exclusively in California, covering its important communities from the Oregon line to the Mexican border, the Bank of Italy cannot be unmindful of whatever may redound to the benefit of this great State.

As a member of the National Association, the Bank of Italy will continue to serve the people of California, seeking always to provide the greatest measure of banking convenience and attending with genuine interest to the needs of its customers.

Menace to Journalism in Commercialism of the Press of the Nation

By DON C. SEITZ, Outlook Editorial Staff.

STRIKING the popular chord has become one of the menaces in journalism. Big interests buy up groups of papers, and they are run according to a formula. Commercialism has come into play by which newspapers are captured and submerged. No woman will buy anything now unless she sees it widely advertised in the papers. This condition does not dominate the paper in morals, but it puts upon its physical side such a load that the intellectual side becomes smaller. The submergence of the daily press and the equal leanness of the cultural press mark a different path.

The press has no means of reaching the vacant mind, unless you make it feel that there is something higher than the baseball score to read, and that the age you live in is always the golden age.

The only real criticism that prevails in America today is that we are too slow. Every precaution has been taken to reduce thinking to its lowest. We have become a nation of button pushers, and we forget that under all this convenience is a vast servitude. The public relies upon the clergyman, the teacher and the editor to do the thinking it won't do. The editor has the most difficult tasks in some respects. He has to coax subscribers, entertain them by all kinds of things, and he does this frequently in the dark. The cultural publication has to reach a public widely scattered, but it is the saving grace in the making of American journalism.

Too Many Seem to Have Lost Sense of Their Relationship to God

By REV. RALPH W. SOCKMAN, Methodist Episcopal.

Too many persons are spiritual orphans. Our sense of relationship to God is like that of a lad whose parents had died before the boy was old enough to know them. The orphan knows from pictures on his wall and the accounts which he has heard that his parents had lived, but he has not the joy of their companionship.

Likewise, many people believe that there was a God who created the universe and that there was a Jesus who lived in Galilee, but they have no feeling of personal relationship.

To such persons Christmas is a second-hand affair, like the impersonal festivity arranged for orphan children by some institution.

The spontaneous joy and personal devotion which characterized apostolic religion are missing in so many of our churches today. Just as the adult goes through the same motions, but not the same emotions as does the child at the appearance of that bewhiskered gentleman called Santa Claus, so the modern churchman goes through the same motions, but not the same emotions as did the First-century follower of Christ.

Formalized and organized religion has lost so much of its lilt and thrill. It is as if we had kept the words of the Hallelujah chorus without the music.

First Five Years of Life Really Determine Mental Condition of the Adult

By PROF. ARNOLD GESELL, Director Yale Psycho-Clinic.

The first five years of a child's life have more weight in determining the mental condition of the adult than any equal length of time from the age of five to twenty-four.

By making extensive studies of a number of children from the age of one month to five years, and discovering what most children are able to do at a given age, it will be possible to lay down rules as to what a normal child's reaction is.

When we have established these rules, we will be able, by testing children in the light of them, to discover whether or not a child is normal, subnormal or above normal.

It is our hope to gather a great deal of knowledge of child life and to apply it in remedying the children who need special training during the very early years of their lives. It is then that they are more plastic. We do not believe that all the mental weaknesses of later life are predestined. We believe that they are, to some extent at least, plastic; that it is largely a matter of proper regulation and habit formation in the pre-school period.

Nation Must Have Better Parents Before It Can Have Better Children

By L. A. PECHSTEIN, Dean of University of Cincinnati.

We shall have better children when we are better parents. Human nature changes not and all education is as water passing through a sieve so far as nature's biological mandate is concerned.

The tangible things of our evolving civilization such as industry, custom, literature, law, home, invention, et al, chang and in adjusting to these, youth seems different.

Society's major institutions for shaping character have been first, the home, second, that of work. Formerly tied together, now hopelessly separated, a void is created which literally cannot be filled.

If a home is always a place where the companions of one's children are welcome; if it exists for their wholesome enjoyment; if parents can enter into the group sports and activities with a pleasure belying their years; if they seek ways of keeping their children unsophisticated as long as possible so that all the thrills of life may not become exhausted while the juvenile still exists, then energies, which will out, become directed into channels worthy of approval.

Apathy of Public Opinion Over Crime Conditions Must Be Overcome

By NEWTON D. BAKER, Ex-Secretary of War.

Less maudlin sympathy by the public for criminals and more sympathy with law enforcement are needed to control crime conditions. Today, instead of making the world safe for democracy, we must make our cities safe to live in. To do this we must organize public opinion to overcome apathy for crime conditions and the maudlin sympathy displayed for the criminal.

There must be more sympathy for the victim of the criminal, for the police, the prosecutor and the judge who bend their efforts to bring him justice.

Crime in this country can be curbed only when there is adequate action by all states and the federal government to regulate the sale and distribution of all firearms.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

The opening of a Public Live Stock Market by the South San Francisco Union Stock Yards Company, March 2, at South San Francisco, was an important event in livestock circles of the west. Facilities are provided for prompt loading and unloading of live stock from cars and auto trucks. Suitably paved pens for holding and feeding cattle and calves, hogs, sheep and lambs, are provided and each pen will have the customary feed racks, running water and sewer for draining. Up-to-date scales for weighing the live stock will be part of the equipment. These scales will be equipped with type registering beams and will be operated by bonded weighmasters. Everything is being done to insure accurate weights, and safe handling of live stock, so that growers, shippers and buyers may have accurate information at all times. The company's holdings comprise 50 acres located one mile east of the Southern Pacific station at South San Francisco. Arrangements have been made for live stock to be received, unloaded, yarded, fed and watered immediately upon arrival, any hour day or night.

Marking the virtual removal of an important obstacle to definite progress in the Pine Flat project, and thereby bringing action by the state authorities a long step closer, Kings county irrigation units have tentatively agreed upon settlement of their differences over the division of water allocated to them under the proposed Pine Flat schedule. While the three Kings county units, People's Ditch company, Lemoore Canal and Irrigation company, and the Last Chance Water Ditch company have been agreed for some time upon the aggregate allocation to their area from the gross volume of Kings river flow, as set up in the schedule of distribution proposed under the Pine Flat organization scheme, there has existed a difference of opinion concerning the proportion that each unit should receive.

Peter Fitzpatrick, aged Modesto rancher, has often read tales of buried treasure, but recently the tales crystalized into reality, when he found $120 in twenty-dollar gold pieces in a squirrel hole on his property. Fitzpatrick was walking on his ranch when he saw a twenty-dollar gold piece on the ground. Picking it up, he saw that it rested on the edge of a squirrel hole. He marked the spot, and went back next day with a spade. He believes that squirrels dug down to the buried treasure quite by accident, built a nest there, and that in their frequent trips to the surface dragged a coin toward the top little by little, until it could be seen. The coins were all dated prior to 1884. A man who lived there fifty or more years ago buried the money, Fitzpatrick believes.

As one of his last official acts former Governor Friend W. Richardson appointed to office a man dead for more than fourteen years, it was revealed in Sacramento recently. On December 29, five days before he was succeeded, the then governor named Rev. Robert E. Kenna as a member of the California Redwood Park Commission Father Kenna, late president of Santa Clara University, died in 1912. The error was caused, it is believed, by the practice of including in the commission's membership the president of the University of Santa Clara. For this reason it is understood that Governor Young, rectifying the mistake, will appoint Father McCoy, now president of the college.

Believed to have been the oldest Mason in central California, Nathan Emory Deyoe, 87, wealthy Modesto pioneer, died at his home in Modesto following a heart attack. Deyoe came to Modesto in 1877, after engaging in the hotel business in Michigan, Illinois and California. He opened the first furniture store in this city, retiring in 1905. Since that time he has engaged in agriculture, having purchased large tracts of land adjacent to Modesto which he later subdivided. He was prominently identified with the early development of Modesto.

He has erected a new home, which is richly furnished. Among the collection of pictures is an oil painting 230 years old, which he purchased in Mexico. Watson first settled in Petaluma in 1867.

One of the sights which greets the eye of the Yosemite-bound tourist on the Raymond-Coarse Gold Road is the Coarse Gold Baptist Indian Mission Chapel: The reason for a second look is the strange architecture, for the logs are not in the conventional method, parallel with the ground, but stand upright. Striking indeed is such a building, because so unusual. Everything possible has been done to preserve the rustic effect. Even the tower is of logs, set upright, and the rafters are also of native wood. The inside is not finished, except that the bark is

The central San Joaquin valley, with its large acreage of irrigated land and diversity of crops, is looking forward to 1927 as one of the best years in its history, even exceeding that of 1926, which has set a record for total production.

Chico Art Club members have been offered a site for clubhouse purposes in the new subdivision east of town, according to an announcement made by the chairman of the building committee which has been seeking a site and means to finance the building of a home for several years.

The American Petroleum Institute announced that the total production of crude oil in California during January amounted to 20,184,872 barrels, and that the total stock on the Pacific Coast territory at the end of January was 148,327,007 barrels, an increase of 2,217,831 barrels. The institute also announced that 103 wells had been completed with an initial daily production of 46,370 barrels.

Murder is on the decrease in California, considering the number of crimes on the basis of population, it was revealed in the first compilation of the murder rate ever attempted by the state government. Despite modern "crime waves" a state survey of murder records for the last year shows there were only 8.33 homicides to every 100,000 residents in California, or approximately one person slain out of every 12,000.

Early risers of the Manning community, Fresno county, were treated to a rare sight in the form of a moon rainbow. The conditions for such a phenomenon were ideal following a heavy shower recently, which had passed to the east and which left the western sky almost clear. The primary bow was well defined and fairly bright, and formed a complete arc at a rather low angle. The secondary bow was not so distinct, yet it could be easily traced.

Thousands of quail, both valley and mountain varities, have been driven from the higher elevations by the winter snows and are found in Surprise valley, Modoc county, feeding with the chickens in the barnyards or making themselves at home around the farmers' haystacks. Quail in bunches of twenty to fifty are common sights on the streets and in the back yards of the town of Cedarville, and are so tame that they will pick up grain within a few feet of a person's feet.

Father John M. Cassin, Santa Rosa, will have been pastor for thirty-seven years in May. Recently he recounted the fact that when he first came to Santa Rosa 37 years ago a redwood tree in the ground of Ursuline College was about ten feet, now in the intervening years the tree is 75 feet high, or as tall as the cross on top of the tower of St. Ursula's chapel. This is regarded as a fair indication of the growth made by redwood trees away from their regular environment in the woods.

Stockmen report the best rain visiting the foothill section a short time ago, that has been received at Clavicle, Tulare county, for eight or ten years. Green feed has been abundant the entire season, affording pasture for large herds of feeder cattle. Beef stock is reported in good condition and will be in prime condition for early city shipments in the spring. Sales have been frequent this winter, both locally and otherwise, due to the abundance of feed always at hand, as a result of the rainy winter.

Several of the poultry fanciers of St. Helena, Napa county, had been missing their hens of late, and Mrs. James Mitchell found twenty-one large Wyandottes dead. Captain Dan Gardner and others reported losses and it was up to Jack Corallo to catch the guilty culprit. He secured several steel traps and placed one inside of his chicken yard and one on the outside where he figured the thief would enter. He was rewarded by catching a dog with his fore feet in the inside trap and the hind feet in the outside trap.

The President's Church

ST. JOHN'S Episcopal church, across Lafayette square from the White House in Washington, built as a convenience and to split the difference between Old. St. John's in Georgetown (West Washington) and old Christ church in the southeastern part of town, in the early days when the question of transportation was a problem, gradually became the house of worship of Presidents and, as a consequence, to be known as the President's church.

This quaint and dignified structure, which is numbered among the oldest relics of its class within the present city, dates from 1818. Obviously, its historical associations are many.

Originally constructed in the form of a simple Greek cross, its convenient location so popularized it that it was enlarged to the form of a Latin cross, a portico fronted by six plain columns and a three-story steeple added, and a special pew set aside for the President.

Presidents Madison, Monroe, Adams, Jackson, Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Fillmore, Buchanan, Arthur and Roosevelt, numerous cabinet officials, officers of the army and navy, members of the diplomatic corps and ambassadors of foreign countries, are said to have worshiped here.

Many persons of prominence in world affairs have been married in or buried from this church. The remains of Rev. William Hawley, who was its rector for twenty-eight years, lie beneath the chancel.

Among its cherished possessions is a ten-thousand-dollar communion chalice of solid gold set with diamonds, made from the jewelry of a member who willed it to the church.

Our Largest Monument

STONE mountain, some distance east of Atlanta, Ga., is often referred to as the eighth wonder of the world. Dropped there by nature in a freak mood, it is miles and miles from any other mountain.

This huge hulk of granite rises abruptly from the level plains, is about 700 feet high on the steep side, a mile to the summit on its sloping side, a mile long and approximately seven miles around at the base.

No less wonderful than the mountain itself are the plans to carve upon its precipitous face a memorial calculated to last as long as time shall be.

The north face has been dedicated to the Daughters of Confederacy and the Stone mountain memorial long since begun to take form. A noted sculptor was commissioned to carve deep into and high upon its face the world's greatest monument—an imperishable memorial—to the Confederacy of 1861-1865, at an estimated cost of $2,000,000.

The central figure, Gen. Robert E. Lee—the idol of the South, is to be surrounded by General "Stonewall" Jackson, President Jefferson Davis and others high in Confederate ranks, followed by likenesses of five additional generals from each of the thirteen Confederate states and approximately 1,000 other military personages—the whole depicting a striking procession of men, horses and guns coming around one side, across and down the other side.

It is said to have taken 22,000 drill holes to outline General Lee's hat, the brim of which measures almost 34 feet across. Some of the carving will bite into the rock to a depth of 20 feet.

The Church of St. Louis of France

THE old St. Louis cathedral—now known as the Church of St. Louis of France—is said to be "The most historic church in the Mississippi valley." It stands on or near the site where the first mass said in St. Louis was celebrated on March 14, 1764.

The first edifice to occupy this spot was a primitive log structure put up in 1770. It gave way to a second built of palisades and first occupied in 1776. The present church, begun in 1831, was dedicated in 1834, and stands today a venerable and historic monument to St. Louis.

Of stone construction and well preserved, it is fronted by a row of weather-beaten columns, carries Hebrew and Latin quotations over the main portal and is topped by a steeple crowned by the customary cross. Inside, its width usually in proportion to its length, there being five aisles, both the altar rail and the organ loft supports extend far out, the simple frosted windows smack of old-timeness, and the throne is decorated with the fleur de lys of France.

By virtue of the fact that the first Bishop of St. Louis was a classmate of Pope Gregory XVI, it happened that this church was the recipient of favors which are said to have been bestowed upon no other church in the world except the Basilicas in Rome. One of the most noteworthy favors grants an indulgence which is granted only to pilgrims visiting the seven Roman Basilicas. By special indult this indulgence, it is said, may be gained by visiting the three altars in this church—though no other church or cathedral is so [illegible]

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

NO OLD AGE SECRET

One day recently the House of Representatives paused to congratulate its oldest member, Major Charles M. Stedman of North Carolina, on his eighty-sixth birthday. He is not only the oldest member, but the only former Confederate soldier in the House.

Naturally newspaper men asked him for interviews, at which the inevitable question concerning his secret of long life was asked. He replied: "The whole secret of my long and active life is the providence of God." This answer was concise enough, but perhaps of little benefit to anyone else.

Major Stedman then went on to say: "I smoke more cigars than the ordinary man, and have smoked a great deal most of my life. I eat anything I like that it set on the table before me. I do much walking at home, but in Washington I take no particular form of exercise."

Surely this is not a difficult regimen, but it might not work out with others as it has with the venerable Major, who first went to Congress when he was 70, has now served sixteen years and declares he has no thought of retiring.

While persons of extreme age often believe that certain habits of life, or lack of habits, are responsible for their longevity, there appears to be no old age secret. Some folks just happen to live a long time, usually without making any special effort to do so.

WHEN BATHS WERE FEW

If certain data we have run across lately are authentic, the joke about the Saturday night bath is not so old as we had imagined. It is recorded that the first bath tub put in commission in the United States was christened on Christmas day, 1842.

Looking up the day of the week in a perpetual calendar, we find that this was Sunday, but it is possible that the first bath was really taken on Christmas eve, thus establishing the Saturday night tradition.

Upon its introduction the bath tub was looked upon with much suspicion, as it is by small boys to this day. In Boston an ordinance was passed prohibiting baths except upon the advice of a physician. About 1844 the Philadelphia city council came within two votes of passing an ordinance prohibiting baths altogether between November 1 and March 15.

Bath tubs were heavily taxed in those days, even as the modern automobile. Shortly after they were introduced into Virginia a state tax of $36 was imposed on each tub installed.

Still, Americans of those times were more given to bathing than the old Russians. We have read somewhere that Peter the Great bathed only once a year. But there were extenuating circumstances. Russia is a very cold country.

CHOOSING A TRADE

Selecting a trade or occupation today is a rather more serious matter than in years gone by, owing to the rapid changes in methods of manufacture and in the products demanded by the public.

In hardly any line of manufacture does one know how soon some new method or process may render all his present skill useless as a means of gaining a livelihood. Highly skilled hand craftsmen in many lines are continually being replaced by machinery, while products which were formerly in great demand are rapidly becoming obsolete, such as the buggy and other horse-drawn vehicles.

Speaking from the manufacturer's standpoint, E. W. McCullough of the United States Chamber of Commerce recently said: "I could enumerate a hundred lines of business this evolution has wiped out, and lines without number have changed in materials, construction and form."

These changes have effected the individual workmen, as well as their employers, and never were changes made so rapidly as at present. Those who enter the mechanical trades today must be prepared to adapt themselves to new conditions as they arise.

SPEAKING OF SPEECH

We do not usually pay very much attention to the many special "weeks" which are set aside for this or that purpose, still it is not amiss to call attention to "Better Speech Week," recommended by the General Federation of Women's Clubs and observed February 20 to 26.

It is notorious that the American people are careless in speech, both with respect to choice of words and grammatical construction. Many who have a fairly comprehensive vocabulary mar their discourse through faulty diction, while few, indeed, are impeccable in pronunciation.

Considering the difficulty of mastering the English language and the comparatively slight stress placed upon it by our schools, it is no wonder that it is so. And while special attention to better speech for even one week in the year may be of some benefit, it is only through continuous effort that accuracy and fluency can be obtained.

But correct speech is worth striving for, if only to enable us to better appreciate the incongruities of Ring Lardner and the perpetrators of our comic supplements.

ANOTHER MOTOR DANGER

This winter has already shown a large number of deaths from the carbon monoxide fumes which pour from the exhausts of automobiles. They have occurred mostly during cold spells, when motorists are inclined to run the engine for a few minutes before leaving the garage.

A few breaths of air containing two per cent of carbon monoxide will cause unconsciousness and death within three or four minutes. The gas has no odor, taste or color. The victim is paralyzed before he has realized his danger.

About 500 deaths a year result from this terrible gas, all of which are unnecessary and result from carelessness or ignorance of its deadly effects. When an automobile is started in the garage it should be gotten out into the open air immediately.

That Texas man sentenced to hang in Louisiana should have induced his victim to cross the line before bumping him off.

SCHOOL FOR WIFEHOOD

An unusual kind of college for women is to be established at Bronxville, N. Y., through the donation of a large estate and $1,250,000 by William Van Duyer Lawrence, who is now 85 years of age.

The particular purpose of the college will be "to educate girls for their real career, marriage." Miss Marian Coates, principal of Bradford Academy at Haverhill, Mass., will be the first president of the new institution, the enrollment of which will be limited to 250 girls of American parentage. Courses will cover two years and will begin in the fall of 1928.

Commenting on this plan, Mr. Lawrence said: "I don't think women and girls need a man's education, but that is what most of them get. So much time is devoted to sports that women who leave college find themselves unfitted for marriage, which is their real career."

Inasmuch as girls who have the courage to enter this school will thereby signify their ambition to become good wives, it is doubted that the supply of graduates will be equal to the demand.

"The people's use of electric power and telephones is the measure of its prosperity and enterprise, if not actually a measure of civilization."—Arthur Brisbane.

Colma News Notes

Mrs. N. Grannucci, who underwent a slight operation at a San Francisco hospital, is reported as recovering nicely.

All friends of Harlod Varni, the popular and well known mechanic at Belli's Ford department, are glad to see him about after his brief illness.

Miss Thelma Varni, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Varni, of San Francisco, was a guest of Miss Margaret Grady over the week end.

Ernesto Grannucci, now a student at Santa Clara University, has been home visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. Grannucci, for a short period.

Richard Olcese, oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ricco Olcese, of Augusta street, is confined to his home as the result of an attack of measles, but is rapidly progressing toward complete recovery.

Misses Alice and Bertha Thiel, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. G. Thiel, who were quite ill and unable to attend to their duties in San Francisco for several days, are reported much improved.

Mrs. Olman, of San Francisco, and formerly a well known resident of Colma, spent a very pleasant day with Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Grady and daughter, Miss Margaret Grady, the early part of the week.

Lenten season started Wednesday, March 2. The local church was filled to capacity on Ash Wednesday. Services are to be held on Wednesday and Friday evenings during the season till Easter. Also there will be services on Wednesday in the afternoon, beginning at 2:30, for all school children.

The Union oil station, just south of the Bank of Italy, has been reopened and is again doing business. Some time ago it was moved back from the highway and its former site made a part of the new sidewalk.

The Girls' Club of Colma will give a whist and dance on Saturday evening, March 19, at the Colma Community Center. The Colma Girls' Club is noted for the excellence of their entertainments, and all are looking forward to this event.

The Colma Athletic Club's baseball team trounced the San Francisco Mail Collectors by a 9 to 0 score last Sunday in the Class B, Mission Division, contest of the San Francisco Midwinter League. The game was played at Funston Park. Danny Lyons, pitcher for the Colma team, allowed only four scattered hits.

Mr. and Mrs. Colombo Benedetti, of Clara street, Colma, are the proud parents of a baby daughter, born last week. Their many friends congratulate them. Mrs. Benedetti (nee Edith Siemund) is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Siemund, pioneer residents of Colma. Both mother and babe are doing nicely. This is the second addition to the Benedetti family.

Miss Alice Chiappari, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chiappari of Werner street, was united in marriage to Mr. Andred Michletti, of Colma, on Saturday evening, February 26, at St. Peter's and St. Paul's church, San Francisco, only immediate relatives being present at the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Zanetti (nee Louise Merlo), of Vale street, acted as best man and bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Michletti immediately departed on a short honeymoon of a few days. They are now residing in Werner avenue. Their many friends extend congratulations and wish them much happiness.

CIRCULATING PETITION FOR INCORPORATION

The mass meeting last Monday evening to discuss the proposition of incorporating Colma, was a fairly well attended but short session. J. T. Casey offered his resignation as chairman, but was prevailed upon to remain in that position.

Angelo Scampini submitted the legal description prepared by County Engineer Kneese of the proposed boundaries for the city. Roughly it would be bounded by a line running from the Daly City line south along the west boundary of the Crocker Estate to the northerly boundary of Lawndale; thence in a westerly direction to San Pedro road, thence north along Brady street to the Daly City line. A jog west would also include the White Tract and some land in that district.

A petition was drawn up asking the county board of supervisors to authorize an election on the incorporation of Colma, thirty-nine of the necessary fifty signatures being secured at the meeting. It is planned to present the petition to the supervisors on April 5.

GIRLS' CLUB OF COLMA HAVE MONTHLY SUPPER

The Girls' Club of Colma had their monthly supper at the home of Mrs. P. M. Henderson, on Dunk street, last Thursday evening. The table decorations were gold and white, the club colors, and a delicious spread was served and enjoyed by the following: Directors Mrs. P. M. Henderson and Mrs. A. M. Shelden of San Francisco; Misses Violet Ver Linden, Pauline Shinay, Fabian Ver Linden, Estelle Atkinson, Anna Kennedy, Sylvia Anderson and Romilda Grondora. Several of the members, being on the sick list, were unable to be present, but the members hope they will be in form to attend the special meeting which will be held on Thursday, March 10. This meeting will be for the purpose of making plans and preparations for the annual whist and dance, to be held Saturday evening, March 19, at the Colma Community Center building. After the supper, the regular business meeting took place around the fire side in Mrs. Henderson's spacious dining room, where all were comfortably seated. Committees were formed and plans made for the whist. An enjoyable time was had by all, with many thanks to Mrs. Henderson for her hospitality.

ATTORNEY CHOSEN CASHIER OF BANK

Lee T. Ross, well known attorney of Redwood City and junior member of the law firm of Ross & Ross, has been named cashier of the First National Bank and the San Mateo County Savings Bank, at Redwood City, to succeed the late Frank K. Towne. Attorney Ross' election to this important position was made at a meeting of the directors of the two institutions last Wednesday. The new cashier has been a member of the board of directors for several years and is considered qualified in every way to fill the position of cashier.

At the beginning of 1927 the city of Portland, Ore., had 90,130 telephones, a gain of 6.71 per cent during 1926. In the past fifteen years the Portland system has grown from 29,133 to its present total, with the probability that it will reach 100,000 in 1928.

PACIFIC TRADE SHOW TO BE HELD IN JUNE

San Francisco will hold a great trade exposition next June, bringing together people and products from all important countries on the shores of the Pacific. Announcement of the big undertaking was made at a luncheon in the Commercial Club by the Foreign Trade Club of California, under whose auspices the exposition will be held at the Civic Auditorium, June 6 to 12 inclusive.

Japan, China, Mexico, the Dutch East Indies and New Zealand have arranged for elaborate exhibits of their arts and industries, it was announced at the meeting, and the Philippines, Hawaii and South American countries are now arranging to participate.

At least 200,000 people are expected to attend from far-flung points.

GROANS BY PHONE BRING POLICE TO SUFFERER'S AID

Groans heard over the telephone and reported to the Palo Alto police department by the chief operator sent an officer speeding to the rescue of distress one afternoon recently. Not knowing whether he should be prepared to aid someone stricken suddenly by illness or to meet marauders who had throttled their victim in the act of calling aid, Officer L. H. Grieb followed the operator's clue which led him to the A. J. Gerrard home in Atherton. He found no one but a maid in the handsome residence. She knew of no disaster, but permitted "Curley" to search the building.

Ultimately he saw, through an open door, a dangling telephone receiver and heard loud and agonizing, the groans which had alarmed the telephone operator.

Hand on revolver, he rushed into the room—where sat a brilliant-hued parrot voicing his loneliness in a program of unearthly wails. The receiver, it developed later, had been left off the hook when a message had come from a workman on the place who could not be located.

STORY FROM THE START

While despondent over the enforced hiding of her fiance, Jim Dallas, slayer in self-defense of Homer Parkinson, member of an influential family, Sybil Saunders, popular actress, is engaged to play Viola in a charity performance of "Twelfth Night" on Gull island, on the Maine coast.

"You can always be relied on, Anne, to do the tactful thing. Walberg was set on it. Stokes can't be beaten in that part, and he's at liberty. But I wasn't going to take any chances of her refusing, and if Stokes was in the company I was afraid she might."

"I don't know whether she'd have gone that far, but it would have spoiled everything for her and for the rest of us, too. It's all plain sailing now except for one thing"—she stopped and then in answer to his questioning look—"about the police. If they have her under surveillance, as people say, what'll they do about it up there?"

The big man shrugged:

"Camp in the village on the mainland—they certainly can't come on the island. We've special instructions about it—no one but the company to be allowed there till the performance. Did she speak to you about that?"

"No, she hardly ever alludes to the subject. But they would keep a watch on her, wouldn't they?"

He nodded, frowning a little at a complication new in his experience:

"I should think so—a woman in her position. Men under sentence of death have been unable to keep away from the girl they were in love with. And then she may know where he is, be in communication with him."

"Oh, I don't think that," Anne breathed in alarm. "She'd never take such a risk."

A slight grating noise came from the hall. Anne held up a quick cautioning hand.

"Take care," she murmured. "Here's Joe."

Joe came in, his Panama hat low on his brow. He gave no sign of greeting till he saw Bassett, then he emitted an abrupt "Hello" and snatched off his hat:

"Little Anne's got a caller. Howdy, Bassett! How's things?"

He was like Anne, the same delicate features, the same long eyebrows and the same trick of raising them till they curved high on his forehead. But his face had an elfish, almost malign quality lacking in hers, and the brown eyes, brilliant and hard, were set too close to his nose.

He launched forth with a suggestion of pouncing eagerness on the "Twelfth Night" performance. He had heard this and that, and Anne had told him the other. His interest surprised Anne, he hadn't shown much to her; only a few laconic questions. And she was wondering what was in his mind, as she so often wondered when Joe held the floor, when a question enlightened her:

"Have you got anybody to play Sebastian yet?"

"No. I wanted that boy who played with Sybil on the southern tour last year, but he's in England. He gave a first-rate performance and he surely did look like her."

"That was a lucky chance. You'll search the whole profession before you get anyone that looks like Sybil's twin brother. Why, Mrs. Gawtrey, the English actress, when she was over here, had a boy to play Sebastian who looked as much like her—well, not as much as I look like Sybil."

Bassett had seen his object as Anne had and was considering. He had been looking forward to the week at Gull island with Anne, it loomed in his imagination as a festival. There would be a pleasant, companionable group of people, friendly, working well together. But Joe among them—

The boy, looking down at his feet, said slowly:

"What's the matter with letting me do it?"

"Nothing's the matter. I've no doubt you could, but you and she have about as much resemblance as chalk and cheese."

Joe wheeled and gathering his coat neatly about his waist walked across the room with a mincing imitation of Sybil's gait. It was so well done that Bassett could not contain his laughter. Encouraged, the boy assumed a combative attitude, his face aflame with startled anger, and striking out at imaginary opponents, shouted: "'Why, there's for thee, and there and there and there. Are all the people mad?'" Then as suddenly melted to a lover's tone and looking ardently at Anne said: "'If it be thus to dream then let me sleep.'"

"Oh, he could play it," she exclaimed, and Bassett weakened before the pleading in her eyes.

He understood how to manage Joe, he could keep him in order. The boy was afraid of him anyway, and by this time knew that his future lay pretty well in Bassett's hands. If there was anything Anne wanted that was within his gift there could be no question about its being hers.

She was very sweet, murmuring her thanks as she went with him to the door and assurances that Joe would acquit himself well. Bassett hardly heard what she said, looking into her dark eyes, feeling the soft farewell pressure of her hand.

Joe had left the sitting room when she went back there and she supposed he had gone to bed. But presently he came in, his hat on again and said he was going out. She was surprised, it was past eleven, but he swung about looking for his cane, saying it was too hot to sleep. She tried to detain him with remarks about the new work. He answered shortly as was his wont with her, treating it as a small matter, nothing to get excited about—also a familiar pose. But she noticed under his nonchalance a repressed satisfaction, the glow of an inner elation in his eyes.

CHAPTER I

The performance was over and the audience was dispersing. Some of them had gone into the house, taken the chance to have a look at it—when the Driscolls were "in residence" you couldn't so much as put your foot on the rocks round the shore. Others lingered, having a farewell word with the actors, congratulating them—it was the right thing to do and they deserved it. The committee was very affable, shaking hands with Mr. Bassett the director and Miss Saunders, the star, who, in her page's dress with the paint still on her face, looked tired, poor girl, but was so sweet and unassuming.

The fleet of boats, rocking gently on the narrow channel that separated Gull island from the mainland, took on their freight and darted off. They started in groups, then broke apart. The launches skimmed, light-winged, the white flurry of their wakes like threads that stretched back to the island.

Part of the flotilla carried the Hayworth villagers—all-year residents of the little town on the mainland. Some of the more solid citizens were in the launch that old Gabriel Harvey owned, which had been used by the actors in their week's stay. Hayworth had gathered a great deal of information about these spectacular visitors, some from Gabriel and some from Sara Pinkney who was Mr. Driscoll's housekeeper. Every day she came over to Hayworth for supplies and had to appease the local curiosity, which she did grudgingly, feeling her power.

Now at last the Hayworth people had had a first-hand view of the actors—the whole company, dressed up and performing—and they fitted Sara Pinkney's description to them. Olivia that was Miss Tracy, the one she said was so refined and pleasant spoken. And the Duke was Alexander Stokes. And the woman who stood round and "tended on" Olivia was his wife. Sara hadn't said much about her. Well, she wasn't of much importance anyhow or she'd have had more acting to do. But that boy who was Viola's twin, he was Miss Tracy's brother, and Sara had said he and Miss Saunders didn't get on well, she could see it though they didn't say much. And here piped up the butcher's wife who was more interested in the play than in personalities:

"I don't see how Olivia took him for the page she was in love with. He didn't look like Viola in the face. She was real pretty, but he'd a queer sly mug on him, that boy."

"I guess she was meant to be blinded by love. And him dressed the same, hair and all, might lead her astray."

"I don't see how you could have 'em look just alike unless they'd get an actress who had a real twin brother, and maybe you'd go the whole country over and not find that."

"He ain't like her no way," growled old Gabriel from the wheel, "I seen 'em both when they wasn't acting and he's an ugly pup, that one."

Then the boat grating on the Hayworth wharf, Gabriel urged them off. He hadn't got through yet, got to go back for part of the company who were calculating to get the main line at Spencer, and after that back again for the Tracy boy.

The swaying throng of boats emptied their cargoes and the thick-pressed crowd, moving to the end of the wharf, separated into streams and groups. Farewells, last commending comments, rose on the limpid sea-scented air. The waiting line of motors absorbed the summer visitors, wheeled off and purred away past the white cottages under the New England elms. The matrons sank gratefully upon the yielding cushions, rolling by the dusty buggies, the battered autos, the lines of bicycle riders, into the quiet serene country where the shadows were lying long and clear. Yes, it had been a great success; from first to last there hadn't been a hitch.

There was one outsider left on the island, Wally Shine, the photographer sent by the Universal syndicate to take pictures of what was a "notable society event" in a place of which the public had heard much and seen nothing. But, unlike the other outsiders, his impressions, extending over a longer period, had not been so agreeable. He had seen the actors at close range, in their habits as they lived, lunched with them, watched the last rehearsal, taken a lot of pictures of Miss Saunders in the house and garden. And he had sensed an electric disturbance in the atmosphere, and come upon evidences of internal discord.

That was at the last rehearsal, when the poetic Viola had lost her temper like an ordinary woman and jumped on the Tracy boy—something about the place he stood in—nothing, as far as Shine could see, to get mad about. And the boy had answered in kind, like the spitting of an angry cat. An ugly scene that the director had to stop.

Then the man Stokes who played the Duke, a handsome, romantic looking chap—something was the matter with him. He had a haunted sort of look, as if his mind was disturbed, especially when he'd turn his eyes on Miss Saunders. His wife—the woman they called Flora—was on to him. Shine saw her watching him, sidelong from under her eyelids, the way you watch a person when you don't want them to see it.

The photographer was sensitive to emotional stress and he felt it here—below the surface—and was moved to curiosity.

The photographs were finished and the group broke up. Miss Saunders and Miss Tracy linked arms and moved off toward the headlands. Receding in the amber light they were like a picture from some antique romance—the noble lady and her page. One in narrow casings of crimson brocade, the other in short swinging kilt and braided jacket of more sober gray. Shine, fascinated, watched them pacing slowly over the burnished grass. He turned to go and saw that Stokes was watching them, too, intent like a hungry dog, the hand that held a stalk of feathered grass against his lips trembling.

Pulitzer Would Have Had Royal Birds Shot

Fitzroy Gardner, in his book, "More Reminiscences of an Old Bohemian," tells this story about Joseph Pulitzer: "On one occasion, having to stay one night in London, and fearing that his rest would be disturbed by street traffic, he instructed his London representative to obtain at any cost the use of some private house where no traffic could be heard. One of the mansions in Kensington palace gardens was rented for a week for the purpose of a night's occupation. Pulitzer was quite satisfied with the arrangement until, in the early hours of the morning, he was awakened by the piercing shrieks, not many yards away, of peacocks from Kensington palace. He rang for his valet, gave him a revolver—Pulitzer generally had one—and told him to go out and shoot the birds. The valet, not daring to disobey his master, did some desultory firing; the neighborhood was alarmed; police rushed to the spot, and Pulitzer was seriously inconvenienced by the enforced temporary absence of his servant."

Everybody Excited

Everybody seems excited these days; people write letters in italics; voices sweet and low have become obsolete; nothing any longer is either good or bad, everything is damn good or damn bad. And the less vocabulary people have to use, the more they use it.—William Lyon Phelps in Scribner's

Frock Modes Call for Soft Fabrics

Sheer Stuffs Promise to Establish Fashions for Coming Seasons.

Most engaging models are shown in the soft gowns, many of which are seen in the South and will establish new modes for the spring season in the North; there is great diversity of design, fabric, color and treatment. Poiret has done a formal afternoon gown in crepe, trimmed with deep silk fringe in rows from the neck to the hem which has a new line curving upward in the middle of the back. Cheruit is going in for sheer stuffs, flounces, fluttering skirts and bows. The floral prints are being used by some of the best modistes in sweetly pretty frocks designed for the tea hour. There are crepes of somewhat heavy quality to be used in more formal costumes, "dragoman," "barcelona," "vagabond" crepe, shown in beautiful shades of rose, green and beige. There are some exceptionally handsome brocades, ribbed and corded, two-faced, in wave lines, figures, coin spots and flecks; the lighter crepes, voiles and chiffons.

These plain fabric gowns, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are carried with many lovely new models in printed crepes and voiles. A cleverly built afternoon gown of vagabond crepe has a dolman sleeve, very long blouse, with a skirt that is narrow by contrast and a new strap sash that ties directly in front. A gown of butterfly taffeta is made with a long tunic that is slashed in the middle front and is confined about the hips with a buckle girdle. The tunic flares at the bottom over a slip of plain crepe showing three inches below. Pussywillow crepe printed in one of the grand canyon all-over patterns is cut in what appears to be a one-piece frock, but is really a two-piece, with a plain skirt, long, straight bodice that blouses over a girdle held by a buckle in the center front.

Afternoon Dress Novelty.

The one apparent novelty in fashions is afternoon dress. For many seasons there appears to have been no distinctive costume for the leisure hours between noon and night other than the clothes designed for every sport activity known to the social world. We have had this type of dress in so many variants and it has been made to serve so many occasions that its model is seen in most of the smart frocks and coats among the season's styles, however they are translated and in whatever manner they are labeled. With the exception of an exclusive few, the women one meets are content to go through the day with a frock or an ensemble that is of the kind that would formerly have answered for morning, for luncheon, or any time of day for which an informal, a tailored or a semi-tailored costume would be suitable. A casual air had crept into the dressing for the day, with comfort and chic the chief considerations. Nothing has suggested style in any important sense. There has been and is now a feeling for these in evening costumes, but not for those made for the early day nor for affairs arranged to take place before the dinner hour.

In seeking an explanation of the change which has come about in even ultra-fashionable dress some of the couturiers who speak with authority lay it all to the short skirt. How is it possible, they say, to put grace or anything approaching elegance into a knee-length or knee-short gown? However, the silhouette is drawn, whatever of finish and beauty of detail is put into the design, it cannot be made to answer the demand for stateliness. Therefore the clever, youthful, chic, sometimes naive, sometimes sophisticated fashions worn The sports type has been for several years something like a uniform, shown in countless forms and made to do service of many different kinds of times. Its hold has been such that any and every sort of frock has been modeled after this design, the material and workmanship, color and trimming being the distinguishing feature.

Softening of Lines.

The first signs are the softening of lines, elaboration in trimming and the working into the architecture of a costume certain distinctive novelties. These include new and unusual ways of handling stuffs, a decided movement away from the arrangement of detail shown in the styles of former years. The whole tendency is in the direction of a more feminine type of dress. A frock that is otherwise simple is given a somewhat different air by gathering the fullness of the skirt toward the front, by unique spacing of plaits, by flares, godets, varied hem lines, cascading and floating drapery that all but carries the originally designed model over the line and into a wholly different, far more feminine sort of thing in dress. In all of the large collections are many charming frocks classified as sports, but so deftly constructed as to be most happily adopted for afternoon and more formal wear. With the coming of spring, frocks of this description will be more en vogue and are shown at the southern resorts in all of the new silks, crepes and mousselines.

In these there are few that are radically new in texture, for the last two years have been prolific in finely woven silk fabrics. The novelty in advance spring styles is in creation of design. These illustrate extraordinary flights of fancy, of art and skill. Pictorial patterns are woven into supple, lustrous silks in a way which more than any movement that has yet been shown places the industry among the fine arts. Because of these the season is one of uncommon interest to designers, who find in them inspiration to create more important costumes. With the courage of their convictions, dressmakers of both Europe and America are making more elaborate gowns and ensembles, going in heavily for the picture prints. They are unique, some are artistic, some entertaining, and all are out of the ordinary. They have found a place in the art gallery and now are being shown in countless delightful models for practical service in the spring and early summer. An American manufacturer of vision and originality has gone into the high spots of picturesque America for patterns which have been woven and printed in the latest silk fabrics. The most spectacular scenes in the landscape have been taken as motifs and successfully sketched with threads of silk, suggesting the theme in miniature.

Favors Supple Fabrics.

Among Paris artists who are creating distinctive afternoon gowns is Premet—graceful, smart, finished, showing a preferencee for supple fabrics in plain colors. One of the loveliest among Premet's late models designed for afternoon tea is a simple gown of black chiffon with drapery cascading from one hip, an uneven hem line and long mousquetaire sleeves. Jenny is contributing brilliantly to afternoon dress in some strikingly chic gowns. In one of plain crepe de chine, pin-tucking has been used in an original and masterful manner. The bodice is made with the crepe tucked all over in diagonal lines to a point at the bottom, very low, with the skirt forming a sunburst and lifted in front.

In another afternoon dress, also of crepe, Vionnet reverses the popular model that has a full-gathered front and places her drapery at the back in the form of a large flat jabot. In one picturesque translation of a Paris gown, the scheme of diagonal lines and sun-burst plaits is shown in beautifully shaded green crepe chiffon. In this the new capelike dolman sleeves are shown in a bodice that is drawn close in a girdle arrangement about the hips. In a charming frock that belies its "sports" label, is a one-piece of crepe Elizabeth arranged with a cascade at one side.

Fordham Plays Basket Ball

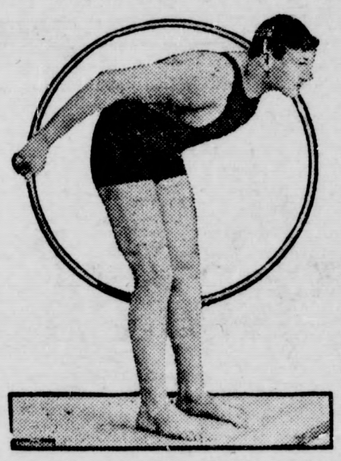
Photograph shows a scrimmage between the varsity and freshman teams of Fordham university in the Fordham gym during basket ball practice.

Prosperous Year Is Expected for Golf

One big business that promises to keep going at a lively rate in 1927 is golf. Reports indicate that 1,000 new golf clubs were started in 1926. Experts estimate that they will spend approximately $138,000,000 during 1927 for new sprinkling systems and supplies and $15,000,000 for salaries, awards and entertainment.

The expenditures of the 4,000 clubs previously in existence, added to those of the new ones, and the incidantals of members for clubs, balls and clothing, statisticians say, will run the total golf bill far past the $1,000,000,000 mark reached in 1926.

Kojac Sets Records



Photograph shows George Kojac, sensational stunt swimmer of the DeWitt Clinton high school of New York, who set two records for the 100-yard swim at the University of Pennsylvania scholastic meet. Kojac broke the meet record and also set new figures for the national indoor record by covering the distance in 0.55 3-5, but a fifth of a second slower than the world's scholastic mark for the distance.

Stuffy McInnis Knows Both Major Circuits

John ("Stuffy") McInnis, who breaks into managerial ranks as playing head of the Philadelphia club of the National league, has had plenty of experience as a player in both major circuits. He will stand alone as one who has played on four clubs in two cities. He covered first base for the Red Sox and Braves in Boston and when he plays his first game at first for the Phillies, he will take up in Philadelphia where he left off with the Athletics. He became a star under Connie Mack. McInnis also played for Cleveland and Pittsburgh and has participated in five world series, three with the Athletics, and one each with the Red Sox and Pirates.

Fidel LaBarba Inspects Hoary Halls of Harvard

Harvard university, without which no famed foreigner's American itinerary is complete, has experienced something new in the way of visitors.

Fidel LaBarba, world flyweight champion, established a precedent in pugilism by inspecting Harvard's classrooms and dormitories while vacationing in New England.

It was noted that the diminutive prize fighter received fully as much attention from students as any president or prince who had ever wandered through the hoary halls.

"Oh, boy," exclaimed Fidel, "it will only be until next September when I will hang up the boxing gloves to enter Stanford university at home."

Motorcycle Pal of Young Enters Movies

William Hastings, pal of George Young on the long motorcycle trek from Toronto, Ont., to California, announced he had signed a film contract for a picture in which the seventeen-year-old winner of the $25,000 Santa Catalina channel swim will not appear.

The contract will pay young Hastings a minimum salary of $300 a week with a 50 per cent interest in the profits of the film. The scenario is based on the adventures of the two boys on their way from Canada to southern California in order that Young might compete in the ocean marathon. Young is reported to have a contract for a similar film under consideration.

HE NEGLECTED TO FOLLOW THROUGH

Important in Almost Any Pass in Basket Ball.

John Dobbin was a forward on the State Center (Iowa) high school team last year, and Dobbin's passing was faulty. His coach, H. C. Johnson, taught him the technique of the various passes, but one thing Dobbin had great difficulty learning. That was the follow through—an important element of almost any pass, writes Mitchell V. Charnley, in the American Boy Magazine. The ball is passed from a regular stride. You hold it waist high, fingers pointing downward, grasping it along the axis; your elbows are bent and out from the body. Deliver the ball with a snap of the wrist, giving it a natural under-english.

And then—follow through! Your fingers and arms follow through behind the ball, while the rear leg follows through in the next step. The follow through helps you to give the ball direction, accuracy, speed enough to send it parallel to the floor (not in an arch) until it reaches the receiver.

Another frequently used team pass, and a very fast one, is the push pass. You can use it from any kind of position. Hold the ball chest high, your hands slightly behind the axis. Then, with a sudden forward push of arms and hands, shoot the ball away from you, following through with arms and hands. Often, in scrimmage, this pass is almost a "bat pass," for it can be executed very rapidly. It must have speed enough to travel parallel to the floor, like the two-hand underhand pass.

The one-hand underhand pass isn't much used, because it's slow—requires readjustment of the hands after catching the ball. And the two-hand pass from above the shoulder should never be used. Don't try it.

If you know the push pass and the two-hand underhand, you'll be able to take care of practically all situations. But suppose you want to make a long pass—too long for one of the team passes. Then you'll probably use the shoulder pass. This is a good deal like the catcher's throw in baseball. The ball is held shoulder high in one hand, and shot straight forward with an under-english that makes it carry more easily and accurately. The passing arm and whole body follow through. You must learn to execute this pass with the right foot forward as well as the left if you pass with your right hand, to avoid a "violation foul"—double dribble and illegal start on the dribble. This is not in the strictest sense a foul.

There are three hook passes, all used for special purposes. One you'll use when you've dribbled to the side lines in the offensive half of the floor. Leap forward and upward, taking the ball in your hands and turning in the air so as to face the other way. At the top of the jump deliver the ball with a full arm sweep from well above the head, then land with feet spread; you'll be facing just opposite to the direction you were dribbling. This pass is valuable for a tall man cornered near the side line, for it is a fast surprise play and often crosses up the defense.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

PETER'S TRIP

"There was once," said Daddy, "a little boy named Peter who had always longed to see the man in the moon.

He Fell Sound Asleep.

"Every night when there was a full moon he would sit at his window and look at the funny, jolly face of the old man until he became so sleepy he would have to go to bed.

"One night he sat watching so long that he fell sound asleep by the window.

"It was not long before he saw the strangest thing.

"The moon seemed to be growing larger and larger, and soon it was back of a tree near his window.

"He could see quite plainly the jolly old face of his beloved man in the moon looking jollier and fatter than ever.

"The old man grinned from ear to ear at Peter, and in a moment or two he spoke:

"'Well, Peter, here I am. Now, how do you like me?'

"And, as he spoke, he chuckled and laughed.

"'Oh, I think you're wonderful,' said Peter, with wild enthusiasm and joy.

"'So you think I'm wonderful, do you? Ha, ha! Well, that is a joke.'

"'But there certainly isn't any one else just like me, that's true enough.

"'So maybe I am wonderful because I am so queer. What about that?'

"'Oh, no,' said Peter, 'you're wonderful because you're so fat and jolly and because you're always laughing and seeming to have a good time.'

"At that the old man in the moon laughed some more and said:

"'Well, you're a funny little chap, too. All folks don't think it's such a compliment to be fat, but I do.

"'It's the way I am, you see, and it's best to be satisfied with the way you are, isn't it?

"'If you really like me then I'll take you off in my chariot of mist to visit the stars, and you'll call on all the bright queens of the stars, who sparkle so you can see them from down on the earth.'

"So off went Peter with the man in the moon for the most gorgeous trip.

"They visited all the stars, saw the bright fairy queens who live in them and all the little elves and brownies.

"Then the man in the moon showed Peter where in the sky he stayed and how he moved every week so that all the little boys and girls in the world could see a full moon every month.

"And Peter could see down below all the wee little houses (they looked so small from where Peter was) and the earth, which looked very funny and small, too, from up in the moon.

Off Went Peter.

"Peter felt a little afraid at first that he'd fall, but as he'd never heard of the man in the moon having a tumble to earth he felt comforted.

"Alas, all too soon the journey had to end, for Peter heard the distant sound of a breakfast bell.

"As he yawned he realized he had been asleep all night by the window but oh, such a gorgeous sleep as it had been!"

Raymond A. Doering, one of the ambitious boys of this city and at present a popular employe of the Pacific Fruit Express Co., serving in the responsible position of test engineer, is still working during his spare moments to advance himself. Like Abraham Lincoln and other noted persons he believes that one's education must be continued ardently until the end. Recently he won a scholarship from the Seivel Institute of Chicago, a school of technology, which he is now attending, his employers having granted him a ninety days' leave of absence so that he might profit by the opportunity his efforts had won. Young men with the energy and determination of Mr. Doering are those upon whom the success of the future depends.

Mr. and Mrs. Heller, of Brunswick avenue, have moved to San Francisco on account of business.

Last Tuesday the Visiting Bees met at the home of Mrs. M. D. Parker. A delicious luncheon and a pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all present.

A fire of unknown origin broke out in Pat Kennedy's home on Mission street last Friday night, but was extinguished before serious harm was done.

Two beautiful candlebra have been donated for the decoration of the sanctuary of St. Maximus church. One is the gift of Mrs. M. Markovitch and the other the gift of Mr. and Mrs. John Hume.

Father Donohoe officiated Sunday at the baptism of Catherine and Francis McGourk, twin baby daugters of Mr. and Mrs. McGourk, of Brunswick avenue. Mrs. McGourk was Miss Bernice Lucey.

Mrs. M. White attended the wedding early Saturday evening of Miss Mildred Ward to Mr. G. Fogerty, at Epiphany church, San Francisco. Little Lawrence Power acted as ring bearer and his little sister Leslie was flower girl. Both are grandchildren of Mrs. White.

On Wednesday evening, March 9, Vista Grande Circle, C. O. F., will hold a benefit whist in the Masonic Hall, Daly City. Score cards 25 cents annd refreshments 10 cents. Mrs. Bryant, 559 San Diego avenue, is chairman, and promises a good time. Come and help make this benefit a big success.

Mrs. James Nagle and Mrs. Chester Smith were joint hostesses recently at a surprise luncheon and shower tendered Miss Julia May Sampson, at the home of Mrs. Nagle, 1143 Brunswick street. Miss Sampson was the recipient of many beautiful gifts. The guests bidden to this delightful affair were Mesdames Neff, Parker, Turner, Jacques, Romer, Nelson, Bartell, Aitchison, Cohn, Heller, Leaf, Thompson, Zulk, Kelly, Hoffman, Jensen, Jones, the Misses Julia, Frances and May Sampson.

GRACE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Ninety-eight were present at the Sunday school on last Sabbath and a splendid spirit of sacrifice was manifest by an increase of attendance of adults in helping to man the classes. A young ladies' class was organized, with eight members to start. The name chosen for the class was "We'll Win." A bright future is awaiting the efforts of this class.

The C. E. was well attended in the evening, and the society is doing splendid work in helping with the evening services. Mrs. Davis has charge of the C. E. program for next Sabbath evening. A good attendance is asked to help to make the meeting a success.

The preaching service next Sabbath evening will be at 8 o'clock, and the subject will be, "The Marking, or Signs on Our Public Highway. Come and help to build up the spirit of love in Daly City.

Special Notice

The official board of the church is called to meet at the close of the evening service this Sabbath evening at 9:15. All officers of the church, elders, trustees, treasurer, secretary, etc., are requested to be present, as this is the closing meeting of the year.
